Let's Start!

Let's visit the beautiful State Rooms at Buckingham Palace!

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about directions to places in a limited range of social situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about things to do or take on a trip.
- I can say how far a place is.
- I can give orders and/or instructions.

Ask your partner:

- Do you want to visit Buckingham Palace? Why or why not?
- What do you expect to see there?

Let's Explore!

Sally is at the tourist office. She wants to go to Buckingham Palace!

* "Buckingham Palace" is where the Queen and her family live in London.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Sally: Hello!

Tourist Office Agent: Good afternoon. Welcome to the tourist office!

Sally: Thank you. I'm really enjoying my trip.

Tourist Office Agent: How do you like the London weather?

Sally: Well ... not so much. It's pretty damp here.

Tourist Office Agent: Yes, London is often cool and cloudy.

Sally: I'd like to visit Buckingham Palace. How far is it?

Tourist Office Agent: It's about 10 miles away.

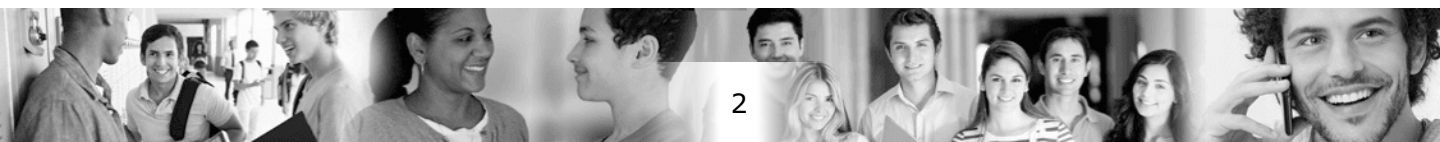

Sally: That's too far to walk.

Tourist Office Agent: Yes. It's about 40-minute walk. The Underground is close. Take the Tube to James Park Station, then walk through St. James Park.

Sally: What should I do there?

Tourist Office Agent: Visit the Queen's Gallery and Royal Mews. They're beautiful. If you want to see the State Rooms, you have to apply. Contact the visitors office for an application form.

Sally: Thank you!

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

How Far Is It?

The question "How far is it?" asks for the distance from where you are to another place. You use the Simple Present tense to ask this question.

You can use near, close and far to say the distance of something to where you are.

Near and close have the same meaning. Far has the opposite meaning.

The expression too far means something is very far in a negative way.

You often talk about how far something is using the time it takes to walk or drive. A hyphen (-) goes between the number and the word minute or hour.

Examples:

- How far is it?
- It's about 10 miles away.
- It's about 40-minute walk.
- That's too far to walk.
- The Underground is close.

Imperatives

Imperatives are verbs in the base form. You don't use a subject.

You can use Imperatives when you give directions or suggestions.

Directions	Suggestions
