Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: Take a walk with me to Westminster.

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about directions to places in a limited range of social situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can say and use the ou sound like ground.
- I can say and use going to/gonna.
- I can identify key information in a short audio.

Ask your partner:

- What is in the center of your town or city?
- Is there a church? Government buildings? What buildings are there?

Let's Explore!

Listen to Sally read her blog about going to Westminster.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Sites in London

When you are in London, you have to visit Buckingham Palace, Westminster Abbey and the beautiful cathedral in Westminster. Getting to Westminster from the London Eye is really easy. You can take the Westminster Bridge, and go around the other side of the River Thames in ten minutes.

If you want to spend a few pounds, you can get a cab. I'm in Westminster at the moment and then I'm going to go to the Tate Modern. There are so many tourists. There is a tour group of boy scouts outside the Abbey. The organizer is talking about the stunning grounds that surround this famous building. I am gonna take a tour as well. The architecture is magnificent!

Have you visited any of these locations?

I'd love to hear from you,
Sally

Let's Practice!

Let's practice words with the ou sound.

Instructions: Read the words and sentences aloud.

pounds / surround / grounds / scouts / around

Learning Points

Informal Contractions

You use informal contractions (short forms) when you speak casually.

For example:

"Gonna" is a short form of "going to". If you say going to very fast, it can sound like gonna.

Correct Words	Informal Contraction	Example
have to	hafta	I hafta walk across the Westminster Bridge.
give me	gimme	Gimme your car keys.
(have) got to	gotta	Have they gotta go?
want to	wanna	I wanna cup of tea.
